CONGRESS AND THE PRESIDENT.

Washington, March 19,-Although no monizing the conflicting views of a Demo cratic Congress and a Republican President upon the disputed points on the appropria-tion bills, it is already apparent that an ef-fort will soon be made on the following basis: It is already conceded that no issue will be made on the test-outly clause in the egislative bill, and the Republicans are prepared to accept the posse comitatus cause in the army bill, which pre-cents the use of troops at the polls, this will narrow down the conroversy to the clause about supervisors of lection, and here is where the buttle will cave to be fought. In conversation with some Southern Democrats, who are willing o accept any sensible concernation in the learned that a proposition will be made to the Republicans to the effect that if their President will not veto the Supervisor re-peal law, they will in turn consent to the longress in every district the power to selest men from his own party to serve at the this proposition will no doubt be favorably walked.
